Objective

This portfolio is NOT a risk-free portfolio, rather, it is suitable for a client who is prepared to accept capital losses when markets are falling, based on a high equity asset allocation. The portfolio has been constructed based on a long-term investment horizon with a long hold investment strategy. The portfolio is therefore suitable for clients with a long-term investment horizon who prefer to remain fully invested throughout the market cycle and are comfortable with high levels of volatility. The asset allocation in this portfolio will vary between a benchmark of 70% equity and 80% equity on average to achieve the portfolio objectives. Due to the long-hold nature of the portfolio, the indicative capital loss in any rolling 12-month period is not limited, however the portfolio is expected to return an annualised total return averaged out over an economic cycle (usually 5 – 7 years) of 9% per annum before any adviser, custodian, switch and/or discretionary investment management fees, but after fund manager charges.

Management

The benchmark we use for comparison purposes for volatility is AFI Aggressive, noting that this benchmark currently holds 87.02% in Equity (Analytics, 1st February 2023) and is therefore more aggressive than this portfolio. It would therefore be expected that this benchmark would outperform the model and that the volatility of the benchmark would be higher. The model performance therefore cannot be directly compared to the benchmark.

Market Outlook

Financial markets have begun 2023 on the front foot, driven by a renewed sense of investor optimism and backed by promising economic data. Whilst we are expecting tough economic conditions throughout the year, the outlook for the global economy is improving, with a several key developments helping to support sentiment during the first month of the year. In Europe, a milder than anticipated winter has improved the outlook for the energy story and expectations of lower demand for natural gas has caused prices to cool, alleviating inflationary headaches. Whilst the outlook for the UK is a little more uncertain, investors have not shied away from attractive valuations in domestic markets, as the outlook for the global economy improves.

Results from earnings season in the US have been somewhat mixed, with some key tech companies missing earnings estimates whilst some financials exceeded forecasts. However, at the time of writing, of the 50% constituents of the US Large cap index that have reported results thus far, 70% have posted a positive EPS surprise. Whilst expectations have been low, US corporate earnings have signalled a level of resilience in US economy, whilst forward guidance and increased loss provisions suggests companies are well prepared for an economic slowdown. In the UK, energy giants continue to post record profits, supporting the UK large cap index.

Portfolio Positioning

Despite our allocation to small cap companies facing headwinds last year, as investors favoured more defensive assets, it is our view that this exposure is well positioned to benefit from a recovery in their respective domestic economies and as investor risk appetite continues to improve. In addition, as we near the end of Central Banks' tightening cycles, we expect small caps to benefit from early cycle market dynamics, as the forward-looking nature of markets prices in a recovery from a global recession and softer monetary policy moving forwards.

As part of our ongoing monitoring of the funds we hold, we felt that exposure to the Lindsell Train Investment Trust has not performed in line with our expectations and that management had not positioned the trust in line with our long-term outlook. As such, we have removed this exposure in favour of the JPM Global Growth & Income trust, which in our view has shown strong long-term performance and has remained somewhat resilient across different stages of the market cycle. Whilst further market volatility is to be expected in the near-term with economic data a key driver of investor sentiment, it is our view that the LHX portfolios are well positioned to benefit from the longer-term recovery in financial markets as the economic outlook continues to brighten.
